BEARDED IRISES

July and August are the best months for transplanting iris, but they may be planted very successfully in September or October where the climate permits rooting before winter; light protective straw mulch is helpful. Plant shallow in sunny, well drained locations. Avoid excessive watering. Fertilize moderately with bonemeal.

We have tabulated recent lists of the "best twelve standard varieties of iris" as given by eight independent specialists. Varieties marked † occur in two or more of such lists; those marked †† occur in a majority of such lists.
